

WHISKIES of SCOTLAND

HIGHLAND

Highland is the largest of the main regions of Scotland comprising most of the Scottish mainland north of an imaginary line between the Firth of Tay and Loch Lomond. It also includes all of the whisky producing Isles of Scotland apart from Islay - namely Lewis, Mull, Skye, Orkney, Arnan and Jura. Due to the sheer size of the region it produces the widest range in styles of whiskies from some fairly remote and isolated whiskies in the north to softer trairer whiskies in the south.

SPEYSIDE

Speyside contains more than half of Scotland's distilleries and is situated in the area around Elgin and the river Spey. Some of the most famous single malts are produced in the Speyside region, including The Macallan and The Glenlivet. Speyside whiskies can generally be broken down into two categories - big, rich, nutty and abundant or light, complex, sweet and floral.

LOWLAND

Lowland describes the Scottish mainland south of the imaginary line between the Firth of Tay and Loch Lomond. Only a few lowland distilleries are now in production in what was once a busy distilling region. Lowland whiskies are often, though not always, lighter in character than those from the Speyside region, but they produce a much lighter more delicate style of whisky, however considered properly they are in fact full of character.

CAMPBELTOWN

Campbeltown is situated in the southern area of the most remote Isles in our whisky portfolio. This region once distilled Speyside in terms of number of distilleries, but today there are only three - Glen Scotia, Springbank and the newly reopened Glengyle. Campbeltown malts are usually rich and full bodied, often with a peaty character.

ISLAY

Islay, one of the Western Isles of Scotland, contains large natural peatland areas and has a long tradition of whisky production. Most of the distilleries on the island use a high proportion of peat when mashing the barley used in whisky production. The peated malt, together with the coastal location in which the heavy maritime air is very often, but not exclusively, strong in character.

HOTEL

Malt Whisky List

Welcome to the Kinlochewe Hotel Malt Whisky List.

Here you will find a complete and detailed list of all our Malt Whisky, including the region they are from and condensed tasting notes.

We hope you will find a Malt Whisky that suits both your taste and your pocket and if you require any further help in your selection please do not hesitate to ask one of our bar staff for guidance.

We endeavour to have all the Malts listed in stock, but there will be occasions when some are unavailable. We hope this will not detract from your enjoyment and that you will be able to find a different Malt Whisky that is to your liking.

Our Local Distilleries

Historically the North West of Scotland was poorly populated, and even those people were pushed off their land during the Highland Clearances, so there were never any distilleries in the region (well, not legal ones anyway!!). Most of the distilleries are located in the more populated and arable East Coast of Scotland.

We do have some distilleries not too far away from Kinlochewe and they all have visitor centres and conduct tours of the distillery and are well worth a visit.

Glen Ord Distillery: Is the closest to us and the one we consider as our local distillery. It is located on the Black Isle, to the west of Inverness, 38 miles from the Hotel. It was founded in 1838 and is unusual in that it has its own maltings on site, which supply it and other distilleries with malted barley.

Glen Ord is owned by Diageo and is capable of producing 11,000,000 litres of spirit per year.

We stock two expressions of their Malt Whisky, Singleton of Glen Ord and the now out of production Glen Ord 12 Year Old in the square bottle.

The Singleton can only be bought from the distillery, it is not available in any other shop or supermarket. And the 12 Year Old is not even available from the distillery as they have sold out - only auction sites may have a bottle or two!

Dalmore: Located in the town of Alness, Dalmore distillery is 50 miles from the Hotel. Dalmore, founded in 1839, is owned by United Spirits and produces up to 3,700,000 litres of spirit per year. It has a newly refurbished visitor centre with an excellent exhibition showing the importance of the wood of the barrels and how it affects the whisky stored in them.

Dalmore is a distillery that has become known for some very exclusive bottlings of its Malt Whisky.

Talisker: Located on the West coast of the beautiful Isle of Skye, 80 miles from the Hotel, Talisker is an island distillery where the maritime atmosphere makes its presence felt in the whisky, giving it a salty & peaty flavour. Like Glen Ord, Talisker is owned by Diageo and in fact they get their malted barley from the Glen Ord maltings. The distillery, which started production in 1830, now produces 2,600,000 litres of spirit each year.

Drinking Malt Whisky

Use a good glass. We use mainly the round bottoimed Glen Ord glass, it wont tip over....probably.

Tilt and turn the glass. Let the whisky coat the glass. This increases the surface area, permitting greater evaporation and thus enhancing the aroma. Observe the consistency as it sticks to the sides of your glass, also known as its "legs".

Nose the whisky. Unlike nosing wine when you take a big "sniff", when nosing whisky you should take several small short "sniffs" to prevent the spirit burning your delicate nasal passage. Place your nose a few inches away from the glass. What do you smell? Now get a little closer. How is that? Now get as close as you can without letting the alcohol burn your nasal passage. What other aromas are there? Keeping your mouth slightly open as you nose the whiskey will help you to better discern and 'taste' the different aromas.

Add water. This is optional. Add as much as half-and-half or as little as a few drops. Adding water depends on the strength and style of the whisky and the taster's preference. Regular bottles contain 40% to 46% alcohol by volume (ABV) and are diluted using the distillery's water source. Some whisky purists (Jim Murray, for example) feel that as it has already been diluted, further dilution is unnecessary. "Cask strength" whiskies are stronger (generally 46% to 60%) and require more water.

NEVER EVER add ice as this inhibits the flavour making the whisky taste dull and flat. It may also cause the whisky to turn cloudy.

Gently agitate the whisky. Nose the whisky again. Change the angle and distance of the glass to pick up all of the subtle aromas. Continue this for a few minutes while the water marries with the whisky and releases additional aromas you may not have noticed at first. If you have added water, have patience. It takes a good amount of time before the whisky and water are completely married.

Take a sip. Take just enough to coat your mouth and begin to slowly swirl it around your tongue. Feel the consistency of the whisky. Some feel thicker, oilier, or grittier than others. This is referred to as the "mouthfeel." Try and coat your tongue so that the whisky touches all of your taste buds.

Taste the whisky. Try to hold the whisky in your mouth as long as it takes to notice all of the different flavours.

Swallow. Try not to open your mouth or close your throat. Let in a tiny amount of air through your mouth and breathe through your nose slowly as the fumes rise up into your sinuses. You may notice different flavours. This is called the "finish." Once the flavours subside, breathe normally.

Repeat

Bath tub			4.75
Bath tub Navy			5.5
Blackwoods Shetland Isles	40%	What's in it? Juniper, coriander, wild water mint, sea pink flowers, violet flowers and turmeric. What makes it interesting? The story goes that Blackwood's Gin is made using home-grown resources from Shetland. There's one snag: as small islands are vulnerable to changes in vegetation they can't guarantee a consistent taste year-on-year, so each year is a 'vintage gin'. The people behind the gin say that local crofters harvest the botanicals each summer - they are laid out on perforated trays while the gin is triple distilled through vapour infusion in a small copper still. The gin is not distilled on Shetland.	£3.05
Bara			£6.75
Boe Deanston Distillery, Doune	41.5%	What's in it? Juniper, coriander, angelica, ginger, orris root, cassia bark, grains of paradise, orange and lemon peel, cardamom seeds, liquorice, almonds and cubeb berry. What makes it interesting? The distiller claims that in the year 1658, world-renowned Professor Franz de la Boë invented the world's first gin while searching for a medicinal tonic. It contains 13 rare hand-picked botanicals and spices. Boë is created using the old-fashioned Carterhead still system - which means the botanical vapours go through the liquid instead of being boiled in it.	£3.00
Bombay sapphire			£3.00
The Botanist Bruichladdich Distillery, Islay	46%	What's in it? Juniper, apple mint birch leaves, bog myrtle leaves, chamomile, thistle flowers elderflowers, gorse flowers, heather, hawthorn flowers and mugwort leaves. What makes it interesting? With an eye-opening 31 botanicals, the flavour is complex. 21 out of the 31 botanicals grow on Islay, including the juniper. It is distilled in a low pressure Lomond pot still as Bruichladdich Distillery claims this process helps to release the aromatics from the botanicals.	£3.50
Caorunn Balmenach Distillery, Cromdale, Moray	41.8%	What's in it? Juniper, coriander, rowanberries, apple, heather, bog myrtle and dandelion. What makes it interesting? Caorunn is Gaelic for rowanberry. It includes 11 botanicals - as well as some traditional gin botanicals, there are five more unusual ones: rowanberries, apple, heather, bog myrtle and dandelion. The five-sided bottle represents the five Celtic botanicals and the perfect serve recommended is a thin wedge of red apple (to match the coul blush apple used to make the gin). Balmenach Distillery uses an unusual vapour infusion method where a pure grain neutral spirit is heated to vapour in a special still called a Copper Berry Chamber.	£4.25
Daffy's Premium , Strathmashie Perth	43.4%	What's in it? Juniper, Lebanese mint, coriander, angelica, cassia and orris. What makes it interesting? Daffy's Small Batch Premium Gin is made with grain spirit from northern France, which is then distilled using a copper pot still. It has been bottled at a very specific 43.4% ABV, as the distillers believe this to be the perfect strength for their expression.	£4.25
Eden Mill Sea Buckthorn St. Andrews	42%	What's in it? Juniper, angelica root, coriander seed, lemon balm, sea buckthorn berries. What makes it interesting? From Eden Mill, Scotland's first single-site brewery and distillery. The team of distillers set out to create a classic clean and refreshing gin. Local botanicals, such as sea buckthorn berries, were added to a traditional recipe of juniper berries, angelica root, coriander seed and lemon balm.	£3.75
Edinburgh Edinburgh	43%	What's in it? Juniper, coriander, citrus peel, angelica and orris root. What makes it interesting? Until recently, Spencerfield Spirit Company had Edinburgh Gin distilled with classic gin botanicals south of the border in the Black Country. It was then shipped to Fife where Scottish juniper, heather and milk were added. In June 2014, Edinburgh gin production moved to the west end of Edinburgh in the	£3.95

GlenWyvis Dingwall, Ross-shire	40%	What's in it? Juniper, coriander, angelica root, cinnamon stick, orange and lemon peel, almond powder, orris root and hawthorn. What makes it interesting? The brainchild of the local Flying Farmer, this limited edition gin launched in summer 2015 and is the first from the new Dingwall distillery now under construction. The distillery name is an amalgam of former distilleries in the area - Glenskiach and Ben Wyvis. As 'skiach' means 'hawthorn' in Gaelic, this is the key botanical. Rock Rose Dunnet Bay, Caithness	41.5%	What's in it? Juniper, rhodiola rosea, sea buckthorn, rowan berries. What makes it interesting? Rock Rose Gin will herald a new vintage each year as local botanicals are dependent on the climate and will subtly change year on year. Dunnet Bay Distillers named the gin after their first botanical forage along the Caithness cliffs, where they discovered a rose in the rocks.	£3.75
Shetland Reel Ocean Sent Shetland Islands	49%	What's in it? Juniper, coriander, orris root, cassia bark, citrus peel, seaweed. What makes it interesting? Ocean Sent Gin uses locally harvested seaweed - washed and dried before distilling in the distillery's small copper pot still with other carefully selected botanicals. The result is a London Dry gin with a depth of flavour. It also makes a good base for cocktails.	£3.50
Strathearn Heather Rose Perth and Kinross	40%	What's in it? Juniper, rose and heather. What makes it interesting? Created by Strathearn Distillery, at present Scotland's smallest whisky distillery. The combination of rose and heather give very light fruity notes of honey combined with slight notes of lavender. The colour reflects the fields of heather on Scottish hillsides. The addition of tonic changes the colour to a	£4.25
